With the update in Course of Study curriculum, we are receiving questions from students about fulfilling course requirements. Here is clarification from the General Board of Higher Education and Ministry (GBHEM) on course equivalents that will help guide students:

The equivalent course to 114 is 224, not 124. While 113 and 124 are not class equivalents, they do “cancel” each other out. Thus, students who have not taken 113 must complete 124. If they have taken 113, they do not have to take 124. Completion of course 114 does not exempt a student from completing 124.

If you’ve prepared Course of Study Completion Plans or similar tables, I encourage you to review them. The GBHEM has seen such a plan that indicates that students who started COS before Fall 2014 need not take 124. This is not the case for all students. It would be true only for students who have taken 113. Students who started before Fall 2014, but have not completed 113, must take 124.
