Course Descriptions - Doctor of Ministry in Prophetic Witness and Service

Area of Focus: Spiritual Leadership in Unsettled Times

DMIN 510: Orienting Seminar

This seminar introduces students to the DMin Program and forms a learning community of experienced persons in professional ministry. This seminar is usually offered only in the fall semester. Students are introduced to practical theological methods by which theory and practices are integrated for transforming praxis. This course aims to help students investigate and assess their vocation in ministry, cultural context (including how it is shaped by attitudes and practices regarding gender, sexual orientation, class, disabilities, ethnicity and race) and ecclesial tradition.

Ministry Seminars The three ministry seminars are offered in a hybrid format with an on-campus component during FOCUS week. The seminars require advanced level work in biblical, historical, doctrinal, and pastoral studies. Each seminar is a two-credit hour class, and all three seminars are required. The three seminars include: · CHS 515 Prophetic Ministry · HST 514 Spiritual Traditions and Ministry · THL 512 Theology and the Church's Ministry

HST 514: Theology and the Church's Ministry

This DMin seminar considers various practices and theologies of spirituality within the Christian tradition. Students learn from the historical witnesses and ask how they might inform life and ministry today. Students write their own spiritual autobiography. They also engage in and reflect on diverse spiritualities with the goal of recognizing and developing their own spiritual disciplines and their ministry in the church as a community of spiritual practices. (Prerequisite: DMIN 510)

CHS 515: Prophetic Ministry

This DMin seminar addresses contemporary social and global issues (e.g., global warming, farm crisis, health care) as they are informed by the Judeo-Christian prophetic and biblical tradition. Students explore different understandings of prophetic ministry within their historical and communal contexts. Reflecting on their own ministry, students consider the impact of social and global issues on the church and the actual living out of an approach to life and ministry that combines a vital spirituality with a lived proclamation of the gospel. (Prerequisite: DMIN 510)

THL 512: Theology and the Church's Ministry

This DMin seminar requires the examination and analysis of one's own setting for and practice of ministry for greater theological awareness and theological integrity. It explores the importance and relevance of particular doctrines (e.g., sin, Christology, ecclesiology, soteriology) to specific ministerial practices, so as to deepen and broaden the interface of one's theology and tasks of the church's ministry. One's own theological perspective is identified and developed. (Prerequisite: DMIN 510)
